The Advisory Committees for Occupational Education

Santa Barbara City College
FOREWORD

Since the days of the guilds, when the young learned their trades as apprentices, the honored crafts of those who have earned their living with skilled hands and minds have contributed much to society. Today, young people are no longer apprenticed in servitude. Modern tools, technology, and educational teaching methods have replaced the old learning system. However, we still view the specialist with respect and recognize the training required to develop and refine professional skills needed for men and women to meet the needs of modern society.

Santa Barbara City College owes much to the volunteers who serve on the College's advisory committees and assist in developing our many occupational and career training programs. These "hands-on" professionals have provided advice, assistance, knowledge and leadership. They have been invaluable assets in increasing City College's response to community needs.

City College's students, faculty and staff, and Board of Trustees extend our thanks to these community professionals. They have guided the College in developing a wide range of career and occupational training programs, fulfilling the needs of our students and the "marketplace." Without them our programs would not be as effective. Their names are listed in this publication. Our appreciation is expressed to each of them.

Dr. Peter R. MacDougall
Superintendent/President
