Political Science

Program Description

The study of politics is the study of how people are governed and how they govern themselves, and this process involves, among other things, the decision to allocate scarce resources to an expanding population with ever-increasing demands.

As a discipline, in the West, political science originates with the Greeks. Following their lead, as part of our major and our discipline of political science, we examining the views of political philosophers from Plato and Aristotle to the present on the question of which type of government is most conducive to human fulfillment and why.

Given that we are a department of political science at an American institution of higher learning, we therefore study the American political experience as a unique experiment in “self-government,” but we also go beyond studying how America is governed to look at other political systems with a view to realizing the differences and commonalities between these political systems. We examine these differences in our attempt to understand something about the degree to which one system is better suited to a country than another, and whether or not one can indeed speak of one type of political arrangement as the “best.” Our discipline also seeks to understand the causes, dynamics and possibilities of conflict and conflict resolution in the international arena, by studying the interactions of states, international organizations, non-governmental organizations, and non-state actors on the global scene.

In addition to the two Political Science Associate Degrees available (see below), our department also offers several additional degree emphases, such as the Associate Degrees in Global Studies, Law and Society, and Middle East Studies, in order to allow students to focus more specifically on areas of interest, both nationally and internationally.

Political Science courses help prepare students for specific careers. For example, Political Science is often used as a pre-law major or for other related professions, such as careers in government at the federal, state or local levels. Our discipline is also appropriate for a number of careers at the international level such as international diplomacy or international business as well as other professions in non-governmental sectors both nationally and internationally, and our faculty invite your questions about such opportunities.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students majoring in Political Science should, at the end of their two years of study at the college, be able to achieve the following level of proficiency in this field. This measure is referred to as Student Learning Outcomes, and they are as follows for the Political Science Department:

1. Demonstrate knowledge of how people are governed and how they govern themselves
2. Analyze the role of government institutions in contemporary society
3. Demonstrate knowledge of key terms and core concepts of political systems

Note: Courses particularly recommended for major.

College Requirements

For complete information, see “Graduation Requirements” in the Catalog Index.

Planning a Program of Study

As a general rule, students should begin their study of Political Science with POLS 101 because many of the basic concepts of the discipline are introduced here within the familiar context of American Politics.

Upon completion of POLS 101, the selection of courses will, in part, depend upon the four-year school to which the student plans to transfer and the particular emphasis of the student’s major. Virtually all college and university Political Science departments require a course in Comparative Politics, which can be satisfied by taking POLS 131. This course is offered during both the Fall and Spring semesters.

Students transferring to UCSB should also take POLS 132 (Political Thinking) and POLS 121 (International Politics), offered in both Spring and Fall semesters. Students with an interest in law are encouraged to take POLS 151, which is offered during the Spring semester. Those contemplating a career in communications should take POLS 110.

The Political Science Department also encourages students to participate in the Internship Program (POLS 295, which can be taken for 2-4 units) in order to gain practical experience and possible insight and direction as to future professional/vocational plans.

Preparation for Transfer

Course requirements for transfer vary depending upon the college or university a student wishes to attend. Therefore, it is most important for a student to consult with his/her counselor and departmental adviser before planning an academic program for transfer. Information sheets for majors, outlining transfer requirements, are available in the Counseling Center, at ext. 2285.
Honors and Awards
The Political Science faculty selects one student each year to be honored as “Outstanding Student.” Students are nominated by members of the faculty, and selection is made on the basis of academic scholarship and the student’s contribution to our community’s understanding of political events. Students are also nominated for one or more of several prestigious scholarships available in Political Science, Global Studies and Middle East Studies. (For details on how to qualify and apply for these scholarships, please see the relevant sections on these majors in this Catalog or contact the Financial Aid Office at ext. 2716.)

Special Programs and Courses

Global Studies Program
The Political Science Department coordinates this interdisciplinary program. For more information and a complete description of this major, see Program Director, Dr. Andrea Haupt, IDC 357, ext. 3735 and “Global Studies” in this Catalog.

Law and Society Program
The Political Science Department coordinates this interdisciplinary program. For more information and a complete description of this major, contact Faculty coordinator, Mr. Joseph Martorana, IDC 349, ext. 4277 and see “Law and Society Program” below.

Middle East Studies Program
The Political Science Department coordinates this interdisciplinary program. For more information and a complete description of this major, contact Program Director, Dr. M.M. Eskandari-Qajar, IDC 352, ext. 2435 and see “Middle East Studies” in this Catalog.

Honors Courses
POLS 134H (Political Violence, Honors) is an interdisciplinary honors course organized as a seminar with extensive readings and requiring a major research paper. See Dr. M. M. Eskandari-Qajar (IDC-352, ext. 2435) for further information.
POLS 106H (The Presidency and American Institutions, Honors) presents the American Presidency as the linchpin of the American constitutional system.

Emphasis is on the relationship among the President, Congress, courts, the federal system, political parties, interest groups and the bureaucracy. Contact Dr. John Kay, professor emeritus, at kay@sbcc.edu for further information.

Work-Study Programs and Simulations
The Political Science department offers three courses which involve field work in Sacramento, Washington, D.C. and at selected campuses, including our own, hosting Model United Nations conferences. POLS 107 takes students to Sacramento to view California’s political process and POLS 295 accomplishes the same thing for Washington, D.C., when combined with the Washington D.C. Internship and Study Program (SB/DC). Contact the Study Abroad Office at ext. 2494, for the latest information on the next program to Washington, D.C. or contact Dr. M. M. Eskandari-Qajar, chair of Political Science at ext. 2435. Lastly, POLS 122 and 123 involve participation in a regional simulation of the Model United Nations. For more information on the Model UN and participation in it, contact Dr. Andrea B. Haupt at ext. 3735 or Mr. David Morris, Dept. of History, at ext. 5145.

Internships
Our department also places students as interns with local attorneys’ offices, public officials, or with other professionals engaged in the discipline of political science. Interested students should contact Dr. M. M. Eskandari-Qajar at ext. 2435, Dr. Andrea Haupt at ext. 3735 and Mr. Joseph Martorana at ext. 4277.

Tutorial Assistance
The faculty of the Political Science Department encourages students who might be interested in a career in teaching and who have taken our basic course, POLS 101, to inquire about opportunities to serve as tutors for other students. Several of our Political Science courses, such as POLS 101 are offered as Gateway courses and have regular tutorials as well as discussion sections attached to them. For more information on the Gateway Program and the Gateway Center, please contact Ms. Sheila Wiley, Director, at ext. 5156. Regular tutorials in Political Science (various classes) are also available at the Departmental Advising
Our faculty is eager to provide counseling to students seeking to explore career opportunities which relate to the Political Science major or who simply need further information about any of our course offerings. Please contact the chair of the department, Dr. M.M. Eskandari-Qajar at ext. 2435, for an appointment to explore the varieties of options available to students. Additionally, students should seek out the Career Center at SBCC for information on jobs in the field, at ext. 2331.

Student Participation
We invite student input at any time about needed changes in curriculum or additions to our program. Our course offerings are constantly under review and we welcome student perspective. The Political Science department also coordinates three student clubs affiliated with the various majors under Political Science:

- The Political Science Club (PSC) is a student organization which plans regular programs designed to involve the student community in the political issues of relevance to the major. For further information, contact Mr. Joseph Martorana, IDC-349, ext. 4277.
- The International Studies Association (ISA) is a student organization which plans regular programs designed to involve the larger student community in the issues of our contemporary world. For further information, contact Dr. Andrea Haupt, IDC-357, ext. 3735.
- The Middle East Studies Club (MESC) is a student organization which meets regularly during the semester and plans programs designed to involve the student community in political and cultural issues dealing with the Middle East. For further information, contact Dr. M. M. Eskandari-Qajar, IDC 352, ext. 2435.

Law and Society Program
Program Description
The Law and Society Program involves the study of law and legal systems as they relate to the larger societies of which they are a part. While the program is of special interest to students who plan careers in government service or law, many of the majors simply share a desire to understand the role of law in society.

Some of the questions students will encounter in courses in this program include: Do all societies have law? Why do legal systems develop? What purposes are served by the law? Why do different societies develop different types of law? How are legal resources distributed within societies? How does one determine if a law is constitutional? How does one know if a law is just? While these are only examples of the issues addressed by the program, they do suggest the breadth of the concerns involved.

The Law and Society major seeks to understand the nature of law and legal institutions from a variety of perspectives. The program is interdisciplinary, with courses offered in the following fields: Justice Studies, Anthropology, Economics, History, Philosophy, Political Science, Psychology and Sociology. The program is designed to benefit both the student who desires a liberal education and the student who intends to enter graduate or law school.

The Law and Society Program also offers an emphasis in criminal justice, stressing the study of criminal justice as a social science. This specialization is designed for students who are particularly interested in the area of law enforcement. The emphasis is not on technical training, but rather is designed to expose students to a variety of approaches to understanding the criminal justice system and, more generally, crime.

Career choices include urban planning, court management, probation, counseling, legal practice, federal, state and local government service. This major with a B.A. degree can lead to advanced degree programs in judicial administration and the social sciences, paraprofessional legal training and law school.
Program Student Learning Outcomes

1. Demonstrate knowledge of the interrelationships among various legal institutions and actors.
2. Analyze law and legal systems as they relate to the larger societies of which they are part.
3. Understand the various sources of laws and how the different components of the legal system operate to settle both criminal and civil conflicts.

A.A. Degree Requirements

An A.A. Degree in Law and Society or Law and Society (Criminal Justice emphasis) can be obtained by satisfying the degree requirements above and the general education and institutional requirements for the Associate in Arts degree. For complete information, see “Graduation Requirements” in the Catalog Index.

Preparation for Transfer

A number of colleges and universities have transfer programs in Law and Society. Specific degree requirements differ. Information sheets for majors, outlining transfer information, are available at the Counseling Center, Room SS-120.

Special Programs

Students are encouraged to participate in any of our Work-Study programs to Sacramento and Washington, D.C., which are intended to give students a hands-on experience in the areas relevant to the Law and Society major. For further information, contact Mr. Joseph Martorana, ext. 4277.
