TRANSFER BASICS...WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW

1- What do I need to transfer?
Transfer admission requirements can vary from campus to campus. Most universities have three types of admission requirements: course requirements, GPA requirement, and unit requirement.

2- How long will it take?
This process can take between two and three years; it depends on the English & math placement, amount of units enrolled each semester, and extra-curricular responsibilities. In general, students transfer between two and three years.
3- What is the difference between minimum eligibility requirements and selection criteria?

Attaining minimum eligibility is an important first step in gaining admission to a four-year university, which means completing the unit, GPA and course requirements. Minimum eligibility does not assure admission. When a campus cannot admit all eligible applicants, it uses standards to select students that are more competitive than the minimum requirements. These standards are known as selection criteria which consist of a strong GPA and completion of pre-major courses.
