

Huy Dinh - Vice President of Operations and Finance

Coming from a different country where English is not our mother tongue, I have decided to learn and practice a second language through a lot of struggles yet I still managed to keep hustling from where I started. A new language will always be a struggle for new learners but having a strong mindset will overcome any barriers. By applying to the ASG, I understand that I will represent myself to work for all the students and the school in various ways along with my strong belief and characteristics. Bringing strategic thinking, fiscal responsibility, continuous improvement, and integrity to the audience, I plan to contribute my strategy and communication skills to the discussion about the financial picture because in order to succeed in an event, there is a clear and prominent budget plan as well as being a good listener could help me pay close attention and understand my peers better. From my standpoint, serving in the ASG will not only express your personal skills but also teamwork and assisting skills so being supportive of my colleagues is respectfully significant. In conclusion, to effectively run the operations and finance departments in ASG, a vice president must have financial knowledge, leadership abilities, strategic thinking, and ethics.
